To whom it may concern

I have the pleasure to introduce you the very able conductor, Jannik Wolters.

Recently I had the chance to personally get to know Mr. Wolters and to watch him closely at working with the Berlin Sinfonietta in rehearsals and concerts during three masterclasses he attended in Berlin.

In my opinion he is professionally a very able man, and his understanding of music strikes very deep. He is a fine combination of an intellectual and emotional conductor collaterally. Moreover, he is bringing to the podium broad knowledge and profound acquaintance of the scores.

Mr. Wolters is uniquely creative and a very modest person but very well read in all domains of humanities.

I unhesitatingly recommend him for any future work on behalf of his dedication, talent, and his kind and warm personality. I am convinced that given the support and the opportunity, he will develop to be a very fine conductor.

Sincerely,
